The Lardish National Electoral Institute has finished counting and processing the voting ballots. We have officially determined the winners and are thrilled to announce the winners of the 2023 General Elections.

Lard Lapudding won the Lardish presidency for his second term by getting over 2/3 of the votes and Tutita Col defeated his opponent, Rose of the Wind, by a difference of 24%.

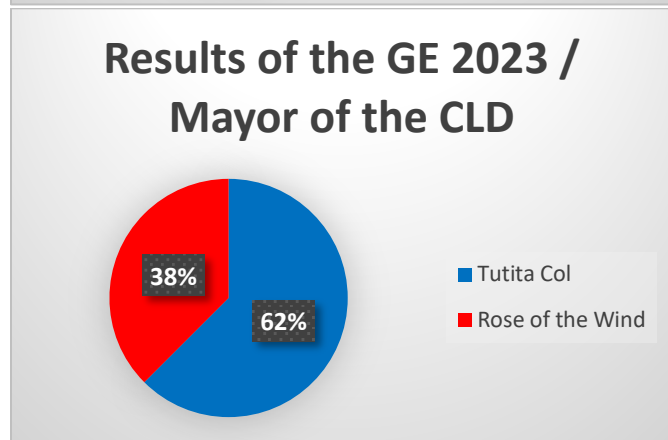

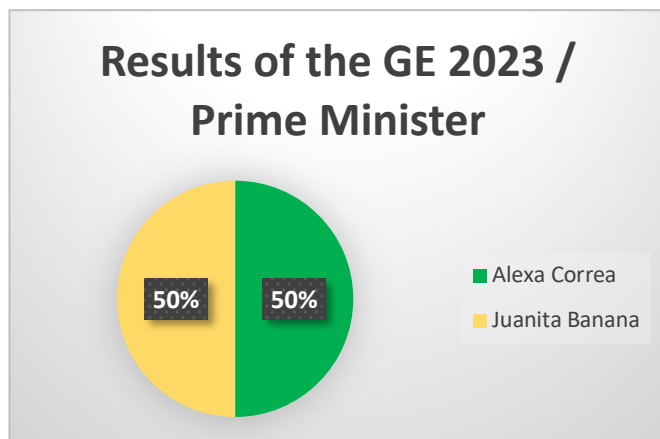

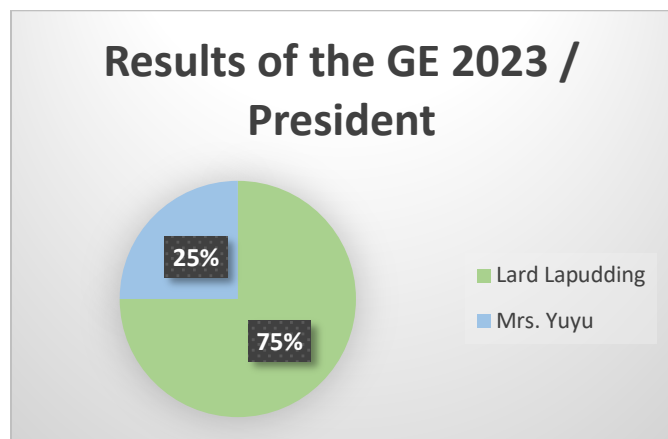

However, the LNEI has found an issue regarding the Prime Minister's ticket.

The system notified us that none of the tickets for the Prime Minister candidate had achieved the required threshold of at least 55%, which according to the constitution, means that there is no official winner for the Prime Minister position as of now until the LNEI holds an extraordinary voting session to determine a winner.

The Central Lardish Committee shortly after announced the LNEI would hold the extraordinary elections on November 09th, 2023.

This is, by far, the biggest democratic process ever held in the country, and we would like to thank all the voters who fulfilled their democratic duties and the LNEI personnel who offered their public attention services for the benefit of the country's democracy.

Below are the official election results provided by the LNEI and verified by Lard Corporation.
